FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

New Theatre extends its run of Tennessee Williams' classic A Streetcar Named Desire by audience demand!

New Theatre's extends its acclaimed production of Tennessee Williams' classic masterpiece, A Streetcar Named Desire, now running through June 19, 2011, due to sold out houses and audience demand! The audience and critics have spoken.

In the words of long-time theatre critic Ron Levitt from Florida Media News/ENV Magazine:

"What puts New Theatre to the test is that it does not pretend to duplicate earlier versions. It is a script which cries out for individuality and – fortunately – it delivers just that at the New Theatre"

And Camille Lamb from the Miami New Times:

"They pulled it off, and they did a damned good job...Anyone who enjoyed the old movie, or who has any curiosity about Williams' Pulitzer prize-winning play, should go to this show. It was an all-around excellent experience."

And our audiences have spoken:

"Streetcar was absolutely mesmerizing. Beautiful in every way!"

"Fantastic performance. Congratulations to the cast and the whole group. Outstanding."

"This play is a mammoth one, and for any cast/crew to perform it as well as New Theatre's did should be commended and applauded (Oh wait, they were....by a full-house!)... I encourage everyone to go see the play and make your own judgment."

A Streetcar Named Desire is directed by THE NEW's Artistic Director, Ricky J. Martinez with an stellar cast lead by THE NEW veterans Elise Girardin as Stella, Angie Radosh as Blanche and making his New Theatre debut, Travis Reiff as Stanley. THE NEW veteran Steven A.
